Riddle One

The sky shook,
the wind tossed
me in the air.

Toto-ly lost,

I came upon three strangers. We kept each other company.

Adventures followed
without pause,
and it was all, well,
just bec-Oz.

Book Title:

Riddle Two

Being brave
is all about getting your appendix out!

Ambulance comes and takes away
lucky me
from school one day.

But it turns
my classmates blue—
they want an appendix, too.

Paris, France,
is where I shine.
Fill me in—I'm _____!

Book Title:

Riddle Three

This is a hare-raising
book review
about a rabbit
who skipped the stew.

He lost his clothes.
He hurried. He hid.
Oh, the rabbit
things he did.

He's old Mrs. Rabbit's
pickiest eater,
this naughty bunny
whose name is _____.

Riddle One

This poor miss had two sisters who were mean to her.
Met a prince.
Ever since
royal balls,
he recalls
maiden who wore a shoe
made of glass.
Found the lass
with the foot
that she put into it—
slipper fit!

Book Title:

Riddle Two

Dear Friends,
A worldwide hike is what I took
and fell into this picture book
of many mini-shots of me,
though I am very hard to see.

Book Title:

Riddle Three

Imagine a castle
without any towers,
or a thundercloud bursting
without any showers.
Now imagine a bull
who loved only flowers.

One day he went wild.
(The cause: a bee sting!)
So they brought him to fight
matadors in the ring.
Instead he sat smelling
the flowers of spring.

You can't make a bull
always follow the herd.
The very idea is completely absurd.

Riddle One

There is a book
I know you know—
the perfect bedtime
book, although the rabbit who has gone to bed

can't fall asleep
until she's said

to many of her closest friends,
Goodnight, Goodnight...
And so it ends.

Book Title:

Riddle Two

Good
wood makes fake bad
lad.
Toy
boy
cries,
lies.
Nose
grows.

Book Title:

Riddle Three

I'm a penguin, though rather odd.
My penguin friends think I'm a clod.

They march and dive so perfectly, Sing perfect songs, too (not like me!).

One day some hunters, silly chaps,
Set out some pretty penguin traps,
Though they had not seen such a bird.

I dived a cannonball—absurd!—
And squeaked so far off-off-off-key,
The hunters ran away from me!
My friends agree it's good they found
An odd penguin to have around.

Riddle One

One special train.
One little boy.
One Christmas gift—
not quite a toy:

A reindeer bell
jingling good cheer
that only believers
in Santa hear.

Book Title:

Riddle Two

A magical telling,
a pig for the selling,
a spider is spelling
out words that amaze.

Do you know this spider,
this spiderweb writer?
The pig will delight her
the rest of her days.

Book Title:

Riddle Three

Dear Mr. Farmer,

The letter we're typing
goes under griping!
This barn is too cold,
not climate-controlled.
If we have to shiver,
we don't deliver.
No bedding? No butter.
No blankets? No udder.

Stop the madness.
End the battle.

Sincerely yours,
The Cattle
